

Single track: that's what this trail is all about.

Gotta love it.

The Sidings Railtrail is well maintained but that pea gravel is nerve racking riding.

Ngala Mia Shelter in Jarrahwood is a surprise. Great free accommodation.

The ride to Donnybrook is generally flatish but sandy in places.

Pea gravel, laterite, is like riding on ball bearings.

There's a few hills as you head north from Donnybrook.

Off the roads and into the national park.

Nglang Boodja is a typical small shelter with a reputation for large resident spiders. Yikes!

Nglang Boodja shelter to myself. Oh, there's a few hairy friends.

Gotta love riding through this sort of scenery.

Yarri Shelter is right on the track.

No competing traffic out here.

Fun riding, that's for sure.

Didn't quite make it to Collie.

Typical middle of the Munda Biddi.

Bidjar Ngoulin shelter is sited near a little creek.

Another tramline in the early morning smoke from bushfires.

Stay at Marrinup campsite for a surreal surrounding.

Another old tram track once used for dragging the original Jarrah forest out.

Parking is an issue tonight at Dandelup Shelter.

Dandelup Shelter is well sited.

If you aren't convinced yet, you should be.

More abandoned tramlines near Jarrahdale.

Great riding.

In the north of the Munda Biddi the pea gravel can get a bit deeper, the trail bikes illegally hack up the tracks.

Heading down to Mundering Weir. It's almost over.
